

List of tasks for students:

1. What does the attitude in theory of partial and general equilibrium distinguish? What are the advantages and disadvantages of both methodological approaches and economic theory to analyze the balance?
2. Define the category efficiency and apply this definition to the area of production and exchange (resp. consumption).
3. What condition (resp. conditions) provides the status of efficiency in production?
4. What does the Edgeworth box diagram of production expresses? What expresses the contract curve and the production possibilities frontier? What information provides the slope of the curve of production possibilities frontier?
5. Characterize the concept of monopoly power, give specific examples and solutions.
6. Characterize the externalities and give specific examples of positive externalities in production, in exchange and negative externalities in production and exchange.
7. What does the concept of asymmetric information express?
8. Give three specific examples of a public good and discuss them.